As for the alteration in the law of the evi-In the first place the depositions taken before the Magistrate should be available for the prosecution at the Supreme Court, to prevent the certainty of the witnesses being tampered with. In the second place, -when a batch of pirates are caught, tried, found guilty and sentenced, a number of them will generall come forward and plend successfully that they have been pressed into the service of the pirates-and upen their adducing proof to that effect, they are pardoned. We make no doubt that Chinese pirates do press their captives into their service, and we of course ad mit that men so circumstanced should be pardoned-but what we say is this-when batch of pirates are arraigned in the dock, it should be notified to them-"if any of you "are pressed men, let him come forward and give evidence against the prisoners and prove his own innocence, when he will be discharged-otherwise he will not be listened to." The strongest assurance of protection should be given. It certainly anpears ridiculous that an impocent man should be tried as a pirate, when his evidence is not only available but much wanted; and more ridiculous still, that reticence in such cases should not be deemed culpability.

Another thing-In piracy cases, no Chinese should be allowed in Court, except of course the prisoners, and the witnesses separately We mean the Magistrate's as well as the Suprame Court. Their exclusion would be a death blow to the practice of intimidation a present so rife here.

It is difficult for people to realise a certain fact in connexion with Mr. H. N. Lay, and that is, his low scale in the order of general paper intelligence. He had greatness thrust upon him, simply because he was an obsequious subordinate of Mr. Wade. He were that greatness with a certain degree of apparent ability because he is of a vindictive unscrupu lous disposition - and he lost his greatuels just as the frog burst itself in the fable that is through inflation and pure ignorance? know that what we state regarding Mr. Lay capacity is true, and if we had any misgivings on the point they would be dispelled by a fact which has lately come to our knowledge, to the effect that he went home under the full expectation of being reinstated by orders of Surely a man in his position who would thus read the complexion of the times, must be pronounced the reverse of wise! Our readers may argue that Mr. Wade, the leader of the lamentable coterie where of Mr. Lay was so brilliant an ornament, must know better-Hongkong. but we say that is by no means certain. Mr. Wade is a good linguist and an ambitions sly schemer. His knowledge of the Oriental character is creatic, and-deeply adulterated with Mandarin worship. We live too in hopes of seeing a public enquiry instituted into the buccaneering career of Capt. Roderick Dew. and Coatings, Fine Black and Blue Broad Cloths.

In our fourth page will be found an extract from the Friend of China in relation to the existing state of affairs at Nanking.
